Don’t be fooled by the RED MIRAGE.

Smaller counties and towns usually go red and their votes get counted faster!

Kamala is underperforming Biden in some ways (latinos, women) but overperforming in others (overall in large cities and with women above 40).

So far no surprise. Typically red states are red, typically blue states are blue.

Rural counties usually report first, cities and early votes come last. This is why we can suspect another red mirage: republicans overperforming at the start and democrats gaining traction later on.

Focus is on the swing states, as usual.

So right now everything is still possible.

I think the issue is it also felt like this in 2016 though too. If it was just similar to 2020 we would all have reason to pat ourselves on the head and check in a few hours. But after everything went to shit in 2016 I think there's massive collective trauma in seeing it again.

4 Reply Award Share

If he does carry those states, Harris would probably need to sweep Michigan, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin to win — a real possibility, but a tall order nonetheless. We have very little data from those states, and it will be a long time until we do.” 😬

It can't be overstated enough that smaller rural counties have their votes counted the quickest and thus the early results are always disproportionately Republican.

Trump hasn't yet won a single state that he didn't win in 2020.

It's mind boggling how many Redditors didn't learn anything from 2020.

We may not know much of anything about the results tonight. The reasonable expectation everyone should be working with is that Democrats repeat their 2020 results.

Stop freaking out every single time a new county reports more votes. Stop freaking out every time a known red state goes red.

Smaller counties and towns usually go red and their votes get counted faster. Trump hasn't yet won a single state that he didn't win in 2020. Trump is overperforming, but he is doing so mostly in states that he was already going to win. Wait for the cities votes to be counted (which takes time) and then we'll get a better idea of where we're at.

Some people see early results like now showing Trump leading by 100 and think that means he's dominating. When all the blue states come in and Kamala suddenly pulls even or surpasses Trump, they'll claim it has to be rigged since they believe Trump was winning by a lot. That's how stupid a lot of people in this country are.

It's also why you get a lot of trolls pushing misinformation claiming Trump has already won or that he's dominating. They target the woefully stupid and want them to believe Kamala catching up means shenanigans happened.

You know what? I used to be scared of getting old. I'm about to hit middle age, and I'm starting to think that maybe it's not such a bad thing. Maybe I'll be dead before all the truly horrible shit begins.

EDIT: lol thanks for the Reddit cares. It honestly doesn't affect me much, at least personally. I've lived in Texas most of my life, so I'm used to Christian Nationalists gutting our education system and imposing draconian laws while they sell our assets to foreign conglomerates as our infrastructure falls apart. Doesn't really affect me much if that happens at a national level. Plus I'm a straight white male, and I can pass for a good ole boy at a glance. It'll affect my sister and my niece, though. It'll affect my mother, who has a chronic illness. It's just baffling to me that so many people choose ignorance, spite, and childish belligerence, even against their best interests.

I don't understand why the US remains as one country? Half of you want to live under a restrictive dictatorship ruled by billionaires, and the other half want a functioning country. It makes sense just to divide the US in half, republicans can live on one side and democrats on the other as a separate country and everyone will be happy..

They have Harris 99, Trump 178

If they're not credible is there a source that is that's not video?

There's a large swath of middle (IA, KS and MO) America that is currently leaning blue. Georgia still has lots of remaining vote left in Atlanta and the surrounding areas. In NC there's lots of vote left in democratic leaning areas... PA is looking promising... Results out of Washtenaw and Ingrahm county Michigan are kind of scary for democrats but if turnout stays high in large metros in shouldn't be a problem... There's no reason to doom 🤷‍♂️

I see Google showing state all red, eg Texas, like trump won it with 4.1 mil votes, and Harris having 3.4 million votes, but only 64% of votes are in

Can this change over to a Harris win since not nearly votes are in?

I'm not saying this will happen in Texas, just using it as an example

How come NBC called Missouri Red when Harris is ahead on 54%?

2 Reply Award Share

KenobiShinobi1 • 2mo ago •

Icanfallupstairs • 2mo ago •

All these places have their own analytic teams, and I'm guessing that not enough of the key places in Missouri that could potentially go blue, did. So even though she is currently ahead, if the vast majority of the rest of the state are expected to go red, then they will call it.

2. 1976: Republican (Gerald Ford) - Red
3. 1980: Republican (Ronald Reagan) - Red
4. 1984: Republican (Ronald Reagan) - Red
5. 1988: Republican (George H.W. Bush) - Red
6. 1992: Republican (George H.W. Bush) - Red
7. 1996: Republican (Bob Dole) - Red
8. 2000: Republican (George W. Bush) - Red
9. 2004: Republican (George W. Bush) - Red
10. 2008: Democratic (Barack Obama) - Blue
11. 2012: Republican (Mitt Romney) - Red
12. 2016: Republican (Donald Trump) - Red
13. 2020: Republican (Donald Trump) - Red

Historically, North Carolina has leaned Republican, with only one Democratic win (2008) over the last 50 years. If you'd like, I could illustrate this in a map-style format showing North Carolina's color shift over time.

Watching the election on Norwegian TV. Reporter in Georgia interviewing two random Republican women. Norwegian reporter asked "Trump lost here four years ago, do you think the same might happen again?", to which she replies about the votes being rigged, and asking the reporter "Why are you here talking to us when you should be talking to some Democrats considering you think we're going to lose?". "I didn't say I hope you lose, I'm just asking." Some of these voters, man.

People think the economy is doing poorly and they are going to take it out on the party in power. That has been an adage for a long time and it seems like it still holds a lot of weight.

Harris wasn't going to win NC and Georgia. The path to victory for Harris is the blue wall. She needs to win the Midwest to be president, and thinking that she was just going to sweep the electorate based on "vibes" was always a ridiculous assertion.

Harris' path to victory hasn't changed from where it realistically was before this all started. Stop freaking out.

I want her to win but she now has no wiggle room and has to win PA, MI, WI, NV. Having to win all 4 remaining swing states does not give me much confidence. I just don't get the optimism here. It isn't dooming or whatever you want to call it it is just looking at what's left and how she has to run the table. Maybe GA provides a late surprise to ease the chances but that seems unlikely.

That is, I can check that my ballot has been received and counted later online. But how do they know its my ballot

So, still no surprises as far as electoral college goes, right? Not the beatdown we Democrats wanted, but still no big surprises yet.

Am I missing something?

Ok but let's be honest, trump doesn't have a lot of years ahead of him. There's a chance jd vance could be promoted. That guy has the charisma of an std, that alone should deter anyone from voting for trump.

Even if Harris wins we're ultimately fucked as a country. Tens of millions of morons in this country would vote for a twice impeached, felon, rapist, grifter who is clearly out to become a dictator.

Dems should have been building up a younger candidate since 2016. If they lost tonight they absolutely deserve it.

Trump gave them 2 impeachments and attempted coup and literally became a felony yet they still couldn't capitalize

We need to have a real conversation about Texas and Florida... Once considered “soon to turn purple” but every single county in those states is more red than 2020.

Hispanics abandoned the Democratic Party this election. Without them, it’s an uphill battle every single time.
